THE FIRST DISCOVERY OF THE DOLOMITE PASS

BANFF, Alta., February 27, 1933

I have received the Trail Riders' Bulletin No. 31, and you have certainly picked out one of the best routes in the Rockies for a Trail Ride trip. It will leave pleasant memories with those who take it.

The first party that ever went through there I sent the reverse route, up the Pipestone from Laggan and down the Siffleur to the junction of the Dolomite, then up the Dolomite, and down Mosquito Creek to the Bow Lake. That will be thirty-five years ago in July. The party consisted of four members of the Appalachian Club of Boston. George M. Weed read a paper before the Club January 19th, 1899, describing the trip, and you will find the article in the Appalachian Magazine of 1899, Vol. 9, page 10. I gave them a map I made myself for their guidance, though they did not seem to get much use of it.

Hoping your health is the best,

I remain,

Yours very truly,

(Sgd.) TOM WILSON

EXTRACTS FROM THE ARTICLE IN

"APPALACHIA" BY GEORGE M.

WEED—JANUARY, 1899

(The party had started north from Lake Louise up the Pipestone Valley.)

"At last we emerged into the broad and open region of the upper valley. What we had seen the day before was only a prophecy of what we now beheld. Alp beyond alp stretched away as far as the eye could follow. Not a tree grew in these broad fields, though beneath our feet and on every side flowers beautiful and abundant strewed the ground. Never shall we lose the memory of those forget-me-nots, with their blue faces, in riotous profusion, fascinating our eyes at every step. Our tender-hearted Beatty, a far wanderer from friends and kindred, hid the imperfections of his hat under masses of flowers, each fresh bunch looking more goodly than the last in his eyes. Nichols and Noyes told off the name of each new-found treasure; but the names were as nothing to the delicate color and fragrance of those alpine friends.

"The riven glacier that we saw from our camp of the previous night was falling far behind, and the protruding spurs of the mountains near by were fast pushing out between us and the valley; but just ahead was the height of the pass; and across gravel and rocks we hastened, curious to get the first glimpse into a new land. At length we stepped upon the snow that lay in the very summit of the Pipestone Pass, and looked over into the rough and wild valley of the Siffleur. Mountain succeeded mountain on our left as far as we could see, and, even if we had so wished, we could not have climbed with our horses those precipitous slopes for a short cut to the Bow River . . ." (This was at an elevation of about 8,100 feet.)

"Below the pass we found the broad valley stretching into the northwest, a different kind of country from that of the Pipestone. No alps dressed with flowers lay at our feet, but miles of rocks, with here and there a patch of moss and grass. The only animal life that we saw here were the marmots, whistling shrilly at our approach; or an occasional rock pigeon, walking slowly over the barrenness. Farther down the valley the rocks gave way to green grass, and then we were soon among the forests again . . . (Camp that night was pitched half a day's journey down the Valley of the Siffleur.)

"The next day our path lay through the woods, though occasionally a bit of open country intervened. As we descended we followed along the east side of the valley, leaving the river below us and at our left hand. Out over the trees we could see far ahead the mountains beyond the lower part of the valley, and we wondered if they overlooked the Saskatchewan River. At last the trail led down the steep slope; we broke through the thick underbrush, and, stepping upon a flat piece of ground, saw on the farther side of it a wide and rushing stream. . . .

"All the afternoon we travelled up the right bank of this new river, which we were now persuaded was not the Saskatchewan, and which for want of a better name we called 'our stream.' It was dirty, turbulent, and full of the drift brought from many a glacier's bed. Above it on either side rose the walls of the valley, though from our positions on its right bank we could see well only the ridges and mountains that were on the side opposite to us. But there in unbroken succession peak followed peak, the dulness of the color of the rock relieved by the green slopes below and the whiteness of the snow and ice. As the afternoon wore away, a glacier appeared far ahead, the farthest point in the valley in our view. And then our path opened upon the shore of a long green lake, the glacier showing just over a foothill at its farther end. It was nearly time for the sun to set in the valley, so we found a clearing on the steep slope just above the lake, and there set our camp. Thompson at once had a title for this body of water which we had discovered, and it is to be known henceforth as 'Isabella.'

"Beatty ministered bountifully to our wants at breakfast, and then, while he and Edwards loaded the packs once more upon the horses, Thompson and Noyes tried to preserve in their cameras some suggestions of the beauty of the scene before us. Diagonally across and up the valley 'Mount Silverhorn' showed its tip of rock just emerging from a long field of snow. To the left of it ran a long ridge of rock and ice ending in the gateway, through which a hanging glacier crept over into the valley.

"We were soon started on the trail, however, with this hanging glacier straight ahead. Whether we walked near the broad, gravelly bed of the river or climbed high on the rocks above, it appeared always the same, like a great torrent pouring in whitest foam through this portal of the mountains. As we drew near its foot, a backward glance showed the winding stream that we had been following, a bit of the wild valley, and, high above, Silverhorn, whose band of snow appeared to be but a spot of white. . . .

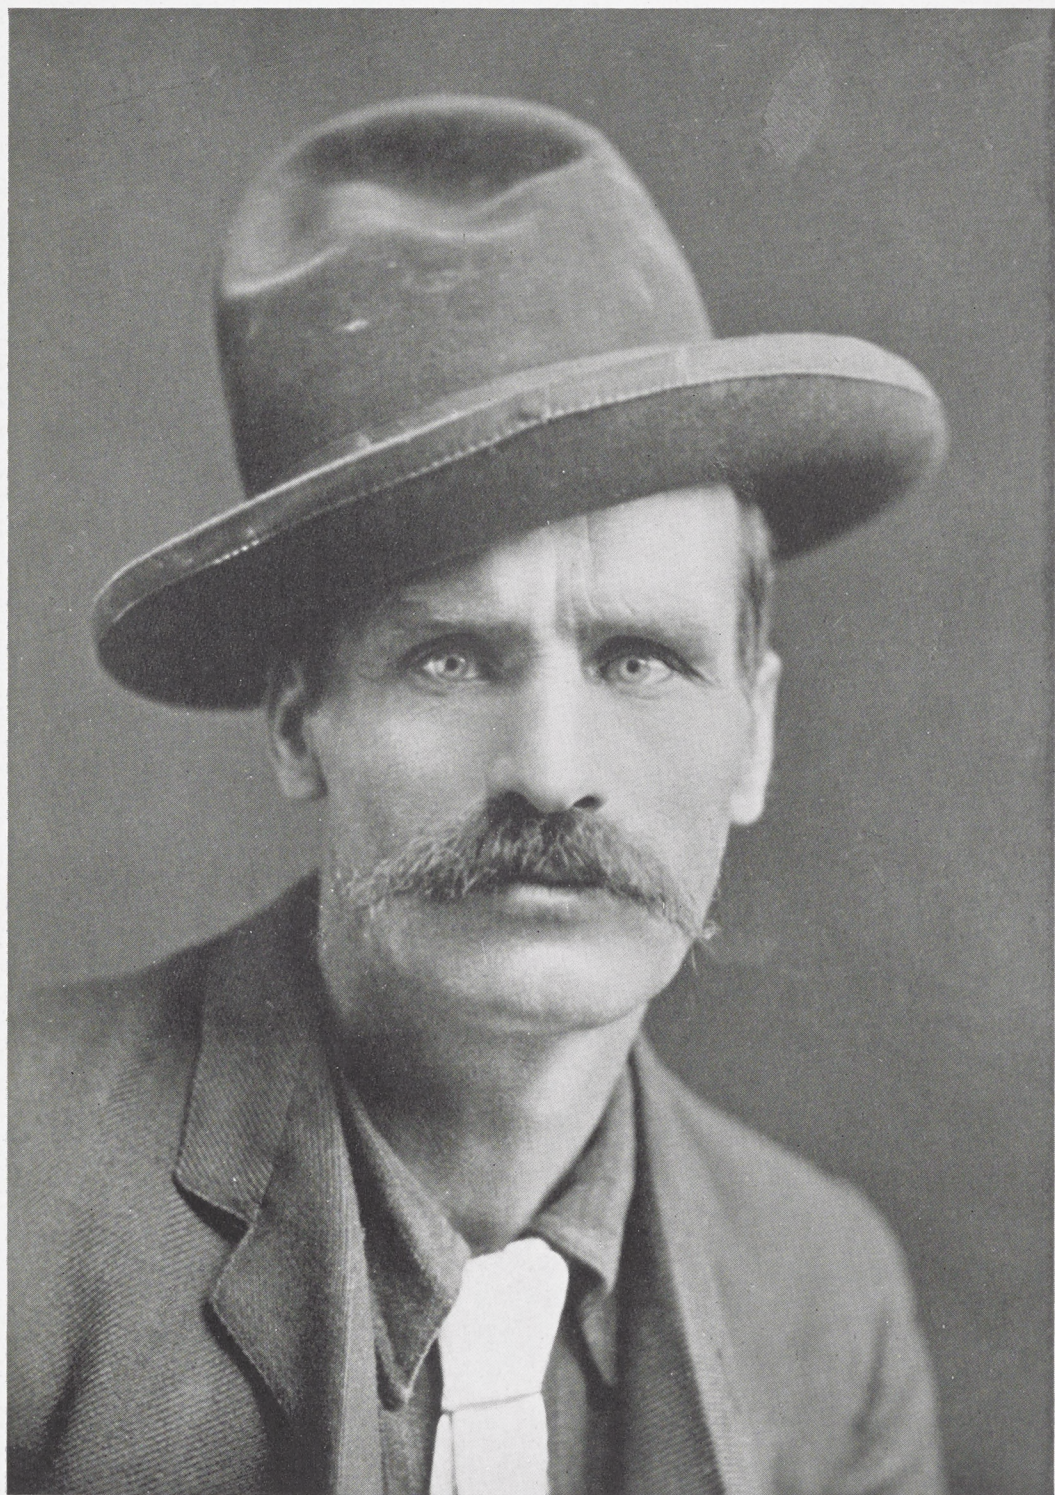

"Our river now became smaller, for we had passed its confluence with the stream from the hanging glacier. The views before us up the ravine were beautiful and striking; for, as far as we could see, the stream lay like a waving ribbon in the bright sunlight, and a mountain in the distance seemed to stand into the valley as though to block our way. . . .

"In a V between a mountain and a low hill, we saw far ahead an impassable escarpment crowned with ice and snow; and just peeping over the hill were the tips of the mountains that we felt sure must stand at the very head of the valley.

"Soon we found ourselves in a pocket in the rocks, where the torrent came tumbling toward us through a gateway. To climb out of this pocket we waded through the icy water, scrambled up a steep slope of gravel, and gained the height of land beyond. At our feet, and extending to the glacier at the base of those mountains whose tops we had seen not long before, was the level bed of what had once probably been a lake, over which the waters of our stream ran in half a dozen different channels. Still we had not seen an egress from our valley. Stopping, therefore, only long enough to admire Mount Observation, a peak half snow, half rock, looming above the western wall of our valley, we hurried up a white hill of rock that lay to our left, and, once on its top, received our reward. For the low rays of the setting sun (it was then about seven o'clock) came pouring through a wide opening in the western wall, and made rich the soft green slopes that lay into the hollow of a new-found pass. . . ." (This was named Dolomite Pass, and the stream was named Dolomite Creek.)

"It took all Saturday to move our camp from the valley up into the pass, so difficult was the trip for the horses. There were thick masses of evergreens to break through; steep slopes, covered with large and ragged pieces of rock or with treacherous shale, to be traversed; and up and down the rough sides of the upper valley the horses picked their way slowly and carefully. But in safety at last we reached the broad bed of the undulating pastures that lay at the head of the pass. Here we camped, for it was late afternoon. . . .

"It is hard to describe adequately the scene from our camp. Just at the foot of the slope which we had made our bed, the placid blue waters of Lake Katherine spread to the very edge of the pass, over which it tumbled and with many leaps joined the main stream far down in the valley. Over this lake and in the far distance rose the mountains that form the western boundary of the Bow Valley. At the left of our lake rose abruptly a series of dolomite peaks, and then, beyond a small green pool which we called the 'Dolomite Tarn,' we could see a small part of the glacier on the north side of the dolomite peaks that had appeared to Noyes and me at the time of our first scramble up the valley. And then, still turning to the left, we saw the great and rugged mountains which now stood like the walls of a vast amphitheatre, in which our camping ground was the stage.

"The task of piloting the horses safely down the steep rocky slope from our pass to the shores of 'Lake Ethel' was soon performed, and, skirting its border, we passed from a region of barren rock to the luxuriant verdure of the valley. . . .

"A long circuitous route along the side of a mountain and then a turn to the northwest brought us in a few hours to the shores of the Upper Bow Lake."

CARL RUNGIUS

We are particularly proud of having as one of our most active Trail Riders, Carl Rungius, N.A., one of the foremost painters of landscape and wild animals in North America. Mr. Rungius did not close his active participation with his occupation of the Presidency, but comes with us on the Annual Trail Ride each summer, and hopes to be with us next July. His painting of Bow Lake is reproduced on the opposite page.

♦ Annual Dues ♦

In order to keep pace with the expenses of issuing Bulletins, and of covering stationery and other expenses, the Secretary-Treasurer would appreciate early payment of annual dues by members.

During the last two years, on account of the prevailing financial depression, members have not been pressed for payment, although many have been good enough to send in their dues, and we have thus been able to remain solvent. Now that conditions are improving, we hope that payment of dues will be more general, as the expenses, while kept to the minimum, continue. We also hope that the attendance at the Annual Trail Ride this summer will be large, as the rate quoted by our outfitters is based on that anticipation. Reservations should be sent in to the Secretary-Treasurer, Room 324, Windsor Station, Montreal, or after July 7 to L. S. Crosby, Western Secretary, Banff, Alberta, Canada.

FOUR-DAY TRAIL RIDE WILL START

One of the really fascinating ways of viewing the scenic wonders of the Canadian Rockies is by horseback over the numerous trails which lead to many of the most spectacular and best known beauty spots in the National Parks. Up to the present time more than 2,000 miles of standard trails have been constructed by the National Parks Service of the Department of the Interior, which provide safe and ready access to places which cannot be reached by motor car.

Banff, Yoho, Jasper, and Waterton Lakes National Parks, in particular, offer unique opportunities for trail riding. The towns of Banff, Lake Louise, Jasper, Field and Waterton Park constitute excellent outfitting centres, where horses, guides and other equipment may be procured at reasonable rates. From these points radiate scores of picturesque routes, over which trips varying from a few hours to several days' duration may be taken.

The popularity of trail riding has been increased greatly through the fine work of the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies, whose annual outings afford a rare opportunity for an excellent ride under competent supervision. Those who have ridden fifty miles or upwards in the Canadian Rockies are eligible for membership in this organization, and the annual "ride" will qualify beginners for membership.

The 1933 outing promises to be one of the best in the history of the club. It will begin and end at Lake Louise in Banff National Park. The route follows in part the new Lake Louise-Jasper highway now under construction. Four days in all will be required for this trip, which will commence on Friday, July 28, and end on Monday, August 1.

Leaving Lake Louise, the trail riders will follow the Bow River up to Bow Lake, where the first night's camp will be pitched. A side trip to Bow Pass, overlooking Peyto Lake and Glacier, will be taken. The second day's ride will take the party to Dolomite Pass and down Dolomite Creek to the region of Isabella Lake, where the second camp will be made. The third day Dolomite Creek will be followed to its confluence with the Siffleur River, and back up the Siffleur, crossing Pipestone Pass to camp number three of the Pipestone River. The following day the Pipestone River will be followed back to Lake Louise station.

The inclusive rate for the proposed trail ride, including motor conveyance from Lake Louise to Mosquito Creek, where the saddle trip will begin, will be $40. This figure will include saddle horse, food, tent accommodation, and the services of guides for the trail. Sleeping equipment, preferably eiderdown sleeping bags or heavy blankets, must be provided by those taking part.

Many other interesting routes may be followed from Banff, including that to Mount Assiniboine, the Matterhorn of the Canadian Rockies, which occupies two days and provides a delightful trip of 30 miles. From Lake Louise the well-known scenic districts of the Skoki Valley, Ptarmigan Valley, Moraine Lake, Paradise Valley, and the Hector and Bow Lakes are readily accessible to riders.

THE "TROPICAL VALLEYS" OF B.C.

Mrs. Mary G. Henry, one of our members, who is contributing Editor of the National Horticultural Magazine, has sent us a reprint from the 1933 Year Book of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, describing a plant collecting expedition she made by trail in 1931 to the so-called "Tropical Valleys" of Northern British Columbia. The expedition started on the trail from Fort St. John about 500 miles north-west of Banff, and the trail ride took eighty days. Here are some extracts:—

"The temperature fell below freezing nearly every night, even in July. In August it was frequently 18 or 20 degrees at getting-up time and in early September one morning it was but 12 degrees. The mid-days, however, when clear and sunny, were a delightful contrast to the cold nights. Frequently in July the temperature rose to 80 degrees, and even in September, the noon temperature was over 60 degrees when the sun shone. I often wondered how beautiful and fragile-looking flowers could stand such extremes of temperature.

"Often in the early mornings the frost caused them to appear as though they had been sprinkled by tiny diamonds, and when the first rays of the rising sun touched them they were so beautiful it seemed as though they must belong to another world.

"Collecting plants while riding with a pack is not always a simple matter. A trowel goes in a leather sheath on one side of my belt and a knife on the other side. A strong pair of saddle bags is fastened to the pommel of my saddle, in which each morning are placed several empty jam cans. Each evening all full cans are aired and watered and in the morning are all carefully packed in wooden packing cases on the horses. Quite frequently the cans were frozen solid to the ground and I had to use my axe to chop them loose.

"We travelled along rivers and through valleys the first week or two, at an altitude of about 1,800 to 2,500 feet, but gradually rising higher. In sheltered places there were many fine spruce forests and groves of aspens and black poplars. The aspen, often called white poplar, Populus Tremuloides, with its chalk-white trunk and small lace-like foliage, is to my mind more beautiful than the white birch, and makes a far nobler tree.

"There were many open grassy meadows and the countless numbers of the large pale blue flowers of Polemonium acutiflorum made them look like bits of fallen sky. Often Delphinium brownii in many stemmed slumps over three feet tall grew among them, and added its deeper shade of dark blue purple to the others. In many places both in sun and shade, Mertensia strigosa grew with lavish profusion about three feet high where the ground was moist, and with individual flowers three-quarters inch long.

"One day early in our trip we passed a number of gently sloping hillsides that were literally pink with wild roses and whose scent perfumed the atmosphere for miles. However, blue in various shades was very markedly the predominating color of the flowers throughout our entire journey, and we rode through these wonderful flower-filled meadows at intervals for about 200 miles and each seemed more beautiful than the other.

"As the days passed we worked our way into the mountains, and the little Indian trails we were using became indistinct and hard to follow. Sometimes we travelled along game trails and by the footprints in them we saw they were used by grizzly bear, moose, deer, goat, elk, wolves, sheep and caribou, all of which some of us ran into at various times. Occasionally we had no trail at all.

"After the end of a couple of weeks the rivers about us flowed at an altitude of about 3,000 to 3,500 feet. We forded them very frequently and swam our horses over the deepest.

"We rode every day as far as our horses could go comfortably, usually about fifteen to twenty miles. About once every week or ten days we stopped a day to give them a rest, and these stops gave me opportunities to climb mountains.

"It took us 39 days to reach the so-called 'Tropical Valley,' but unfortunately, it had been burned over about nine years previously. It was about three-quarters of a mile long and one-quarter of a mile wide. Hot springs were numerous, the largest one, a circular pool, was about eight feet in diameter, temperature about 90 degrees. Some of the springs were too hot to hold a hand in. Everywhere there grew a lush, luxuriant growth of vegetation, the rankest I ever saw anywhere, and difficult to penetrate. Delphinium over six feet high, Roses, Rubus, Symphoricarpus occidentalis, Actea Arguta, Ribes Oxyacanthoides, Cornus stolonifera, Ame-lanchier florida, Viburnum pauciflorum, and Prunus demissa were abundant and numerous Vetches tangled themselves amongst them."

OUR FRONT PAGE

The attractive young lady who appears on the front page appeared in a pageant arranged by Marshall and Snelgrove of London, England, the costume being lent for the purpose by the Great West Saddlery Company of Calgary through the good offices of our President, James J. Brewster.

Prize-winning photograph in the "Country Life in America" Competition, 1932, by Miss Cynthia Longfield

Each year those who participate in the Official Ride have the opportunity of competing for the Silver Cup offered by Reginald Townsend, Editor of "Country Life in America," for the best amateur photograph taken on the trip. A replica of the cup has been given to the winner for the last four years by Colonel Philip A. Moore, the original being retained for one year only. The cup was won in 1932 by Miss Cynthia Longfield, and the winning photograph (a small reproduction of which is here reproduced) will appear in the June issue of "Country Life in America," which we hope every member will purchase. Reginald Townsend is one of the Charter Members of the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies.

Keenly interested in Wild Life from an early age, Miss Longfield found school days, war work and the usual social activities of an English girl, prevented any development of her tastes in that line, until the year 1924. Then she got the chance, and took it, of accompanying a scientific expedition which spent 17 months on a sailing ship, mostly in the islands of the Pacific. From then onwards, Miss Longfield ceased to dabble in an amateur fashion in Natural History, but took it up in a serious scientific manner. She has travelled a good deal abroad, collecting for the British Museum wherever she goes, and often working in the Entomological Department between whiles. She is on the Council of The Royal Entomological Society of London, and is President of the London Natural History Society. She interests herself as well in Botany and Ornithology. As a photographer she is a complete amateur, but has had some years' experience of photographing under a variety of conditions.
